CITIZENS RECOMMEND REGIONAL PLANNING

Carmel Realtors Hard Hit, Many Duties Brought By Convention

The largest convention ever held on the Monterey Peninsula will overflow for accommodations into Carmel next week, when the California real estate association assembles over 1200 realtor delegates with their wives and friends to enjoy a week of conferences and sport. All hotel facilities of the Pine Inn and La Playa will be booked up to the limit, and both Peninsula communities are report-crowded with visiting realtors.

Carmel has been asked to lead in meeting the problem presented by the wives and daughters of the visiting realtors—here to play and not to confer—and Miss Katherine Cooke has been made chairman of the ladies' reception committee, the purpose of which is to prevent the inroads of boredom in the ranks of the ladies, while the serious-minded realtors are engaged in the grill at Del Monte and the golf links—and of course in their conferences.

There will be two caravans arrive on Tuesday, one from the North and the other from the South. The people who are coming by train will arrive then also. Miss Cooke has arranged to have a reception committee at the train, and another one in the Hotel to greet the visitors as they arrive. Another committee will present each visiting lady with a corsage of flowers, and help them to locate their accommodations. Del Monte, San Carlos, La Playa, Pine Inn, the Lodge, Highlands and Forest Hill Hotel will all be full, and some of the guests will be put in cottages.

Miss Cooke, with the assistance of her sports committee, will see that on Wednesday afternoon all who wish to do so may play golf, on Thursday afternoon a large bridge tea will be given at Hotel Del Monte, and very handsome prizes have been arranged for. On Friday afternoon, Carmel will entertain the guests in a very happy fashion. Through the courtesy of George Ball, director of the Arts and Crafts, "Hay Fever," Noel Coward's comedy given this week end, will be repeated for the visitors. The committee are endeavoring to arrange a schedule of events so that no one will feel left.

Child Health to Be Subject of P. T. A. Program Wednesday

"Child Health" will compose the program for the next meeting of the Carmel Parent-Teachers, at which a large attendance is expected. Drs. Koehler, Davidson, Lowell and Brownell will all speak, their subjects being Colds, Infectious Diseases, Diet and Rest, and Care of the Teeth, respectively. The meeting will, therefore, be exceptionally instructive to parents and to teachers.

Miss Farnsworth, district nurse, will talk of her work, and Dr. Tower will discuss matters of general health importance in the community.

For discussion before the association two matters of importance are scheduled: the question of purchasing a piano for Sunset School and the possibility of establishing a kindergarten.

The meeting will be held at Sunset School auditorium at 7:30 o'clock on the afternoon of Wednesday, October 13. All parents, whether members of the association or not, are invited to attend.

Dr. Burton Visits Scenes of Former School Activities

Dr. Alfred E. Burton, first dean of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who left Carmel for the East several weeks ago, returned to the Cambridge of the present day for the first time in four years, to renew acquaintances in the East. He has lived in retirement in his home in Carmel since he left the Institute in 1922. He was appointed in 1902 when the office was created. This visit of Dr. Burton's to the East is entirely unofficial and informal, so that no addresses to the students and faculty have been arranged. Professor Burton was the guest of President Samuel W. Stratton while at the Institute.

Technology's first Dean, and Carmel's "Grand Old Man," prepared for college at Portland, Me., High School, and holds the degrees of bachelor of science, civil engineer, and doctor of science. The latter is honorary and was awarded by Bowdoin College in 1913.

Before coming to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Dr. Burton was a topographer in the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey for three years, after which he began as an instructor at the Institute in 1882, and became a professor in 1884. In 1896 he was chosen dean, which position he held until his retirement in 1922.

Dr. Burton has made a name for himself as a traveler and scientist, having been on numerous expeditions to remote parts of the world to make scientific investigations. He was in charge of the Scientific Expedition to Unamask, Greenland, in 1896, and also took a leading part in the Eclipse Expedition to Washington, Georgia, in 1900, and in an expedition to Sumatra in 1901 to observe a solar eclipse and to make extended pendulum observations.

While in Cambridge Dr. Burton was the guest of his son, Mr. F. Arnold Burton, who was graduated from Technology as an architect in 1909.

Abalones Weep, Harrison Godwin Abandons the Sod

If business keeps on taking stars away from the Carmel Abalone League, the League will have to begin paying players to keep them.

Harrison Godwin is the latest to announce plans for departure.

He is one of the League's brightest. He has twinkled through many a tight game and kept right on shining after the clouds of defeat hid opponents from view. Now he is going up to San Francisco and tell the world about the new Cypress Point Golf Club for the next several months.

It is just possible that he can make a flying trip down here to tear up the sod at short-stop later this month when the Abalone outfit tangles with the Realtors over on the polo field, provided that the Cypress Point business doesn't tie him hand and foot to the City. And if the prediction of Grantland Rice, the sport writer, is true about this Club being one of the finest in the world from a golfing standpoint, then Harrison may have to tear up a lot of office carpet instead of polo sod when it comes to rejoining his Abalone teammates.

AS THEY PASSED IN REVIEW BEFORE THE LOS ANGELES PRESS

The Villagers Are Subjected to the Pens of Special Writers, Printed Eye Food for the Curious of the Great City of Mixed Population.

"They talk of a little village, With a batik flag unfurled. But to them that little village, Is the news heart of the world!" Next to the evangelist herself the chief interest at the Los Angeles hearing of the McPherson case was the Carmel group of witnesses. Even if "angel hands" held Mrs. McPherson up while the Carmel witnesses were giving their testimony, sometimes the hands must have trembled a little!

The Los Angeles Evening Herald says: "That there should be some Bohemian-looking people from that romantic village of artists by the sea seemed to be the consensus of Temple street opinion. However, one glimpse into Judge Blake's courtroom proved that the wild batiks, flowing ties, and sensory bargains of Borgia perfume had failed to materialize."

The same paper says in another edition: "The witnesses—the prosperous, well groomed and soldierly looking man who owned the Carmel cottage, the self-possessed and clear-voiced business woman who testified without any of the feminine flutter that used to be expected of women witnesses; the comedy relief of the Scotch stonemason who helplessly rubbed his bald spot to vivid scarlet when asked to describe the hair of the woman at the Carmel cottage; the wood-yard man who acknowledged that while blondes and brunettes were all the same to him, he gave all women the once over—all these are so varied in type that they seem almost unreal."

"Ironic and bitter is the position of the ultra-sophisticated colony of Carmel in the famous McPherson case. Carmel—the Greenwich village of the Pacific—is humiliated according to news from the art centre of celebrities and pseudo-celebrities received in Los Angeles today. . . . In Carmel, the Plymouth rock is known only as the gourmand's ecstasy. Then too, the evangelist herself has described the Carmelites as just so many nice doggies jumping through a hoop."

The Los Angeles Daily Times says that the Carmel group were excited. "The Carmel group consisted of William McMichael, a carpenter; Mrs. Florence Leidig, grocery store owner; Helen Hillard, Western Union employee; Ralph Swanson, grocery clerk; Ernest Renkert, fuel company employee; William Mack, laundry company employee; John Constidine, carpenter; Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Benedict, owners of the Carmel seaside bungalow, and their next door neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Parkes. All were excited—awed at the thousands who had gathered to catch a glimpse of the principal figure in the proceedings. 'This is certainly a treat to me,' said Swanson, who delivered groceries to the cottage. 'I've never seen anything like this before, and it makes me nervous.' 'I'm too excited and nervous to say anything.' (Continued on Page 16)

Residents Give Financial Aid And Approval

Representative citizens of Carmel, meeting at Arts and Crafts Hall last Sunday afternoon, heartily endorsed the program of a regional planning board for the Monterey Peninsula and indicated that sentiment had crystallized in Carmel for participation in such a plan together with the other communities of the Peninsula.

Artists, realtors, store keepers, trustees, business men and women were all represented in the gathering, the importance of which had been stressed in the last issue of the Pine Cone, when it was announced that Charles Cheney, city planning expert at present engaged by the planning commission of Monterey in drawing up a zoning ordinance, a man of national reputation in his line of work, would be present to address the meeting on the problems of a regional plan embracing the entire Monterey Peninsula, of a practical and ideal plan for the future development of the Peninsula, taking into its scope plans for future traffic arteries, intercity communications, parks and school sites, and the preservation of the natural beauties and landmarks of the locality.

In conclusion the meeting resolved itself into an enthusiastic discussion and everyone present expressed himself as favorable to the plans proposed by Cheney. A resolution was unanimously adopted by the gathering requesting the board of trustees to adopt this plan and arrange for its financing. Subscriptions of $250 were then voluntarily given by those present as evidence of their enthusiasm in support of the plan.

Mr. Cheney, who was introduced by Mayor Jordan, said that he was no stranger to Carmel, having summered here frequently during the past 12 years. He wants to see Carmel keep its atmosphere for he feels that its beauty spot is one of the great things God has given us on this coast. Cheney drew attention to the crowded condition of Los Angeles, where more people came than could be adequately looked after. He said the rules of the game must keep us from touching shoulders too closely, that this is getting more and more co-operative and a good zoning ordinance brings order out of things. In his talk Cheney made the following points:

"It is necessary for any town to have residential and industrial districts, as most cities grow up without much care and with little thought and proper laying out."

"In Europe they have found out how to have certain places maintain their character, and it would be well worth while for Carmel to take steps now, to do this. It can be done without inviting more people to come here and live, for while this city has its own intimate problems, it is compact, and to take the Peninsula as a whole, and develop it as one area is the ideal solution."

"Where will the flow of travel be in the next few years with relation to Carmel? It will hurt the town unless we go at things very definitely for all the flivvers in the world will come here and the occupants will sit on the beach, following the line of travel. We must know what we want to do and do it before the cheap trippers come and do it for us."

"Now is the time to plan out the major highways for the next generation, we should know where they will be, for there should be at least two good ways out of town. If the routes were ever stopped by panic or fire. The routes should be map-

Carmel - Secret Garden Of The Gods - Says Writer

By BENJAMIN DE CASSERES in the New York Herald-Tribune

California had a secret. Nature had a secret. The poets and painters and dreamers of America had a secret. And I have had a secret. But it is no longer a secret for behind the cat jumpeth out of the bag and gamboleth over the meadow of ink and pulp which constitutes this page.

The secret is Carmel-by-the-Sea.

For to those who have lived there, dreamed there — to those who for years have constituted its variable art colony—Carmel is a sacred spot, a veritable Garden of the Gods—and also of those goddesses that are called the Muses—and there is a fear ever present in the hearts of those who live and visit there that this unique place may be discovered by the real estate hallyhoover and that a railroad may find a way to paradise.

And paradise it is. It is the home at present of some of the best known names in the writing and art world and is the mental cradle of at least one name that is destined to become immortal in American letters—Robinson Jeffers, the poet. Over it all hovers the spirit of Robert Louis Stevenson, who lived in Monterey, four miles to the north.

Carmel is directly on the Pacific ocean, about one hundred miles south of San Francisco. The train takes you to the old and quaintly ancient town of Monterey. You then bus it to the little village of Carmel, which is little more than the postoffice and the "trading post" for those fortunate ones who live scattered along the indescribably beautiful seventeen-mile drive which is Carmel-by-the-Sea.

The days I spent at Carmel-by-the-Sea were memorable days in my one trip to California. It grows and glimmers and shimmers in my mind like the vision of "Kubla Khan" in the brain of Samuel Taylor Coleridge. Like "Kubla Kahn," it is an immortal fragment of beauty in my mind. But I nearly missed it! It was whispered into my ear one day while I was preparing to leave Hollywood for the East by a woman who knows every nook and corner and cranny of beauty in the world.

"Stop off at Carmel for a week on your way East," she said, "as you may never come West again—and then write me about it!"

I did stop off. As we topped the hill in the bus a gorgeous panorama unrolled before me—a twenty-mile panorama of ocean, forest, rocks, tiny islands, flowers, sea gulls and gardens jeweled in a limpid atmosphere so pellucid, engulfed in such a rarefied sunlight that it gave me the feeling of suddenly being transported into the heart of a mirage set in the ether.

ORDINANCE NO. 75

Ordinance Providing for the Construction, Reconstruction, and Repair of Sidewalks, Sidewalk Crossings, Curbs, and Gutters, in Certain Cases, Prescribing the Method of Payment Therefor, and Repealing All Ordinances and Parts of Ordinances in Conflict With This Ordinance.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-SEA DO ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1. When any portion of any sidewalk, sidewalk crossing, curb, or gutter, on or along any public street, lane, alley, or way, of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, shall be out of repair, or shall require reconstruction, or shall be in such condition as to endanger persons or property passing thereon, or shall be in a condition to interfere with the public convenience in the use thereof, it shall be the duty of the Superintendent of Streets of said city to require, by notice in writing, the owners or occupants of the premises fronting on such portion of any such sidewalk, sidewalk crossing, curb, or gutter, to construct, reconstruct, or repair, the same, and said Superintendent of Streets shall specify in such notice what work is required to be done, and how the same is to be done, and what materials shall be used therefor. Said notice shall be served personally upon the owner or owners, or the occupants of the premises affected by such work, or in lieu thereof shall be posted conspicuously on said premises. If said construction, reconstruction, or repairs, be not commenced within five (5) days after notice given as aforesaid, and diligently and without interruption prosecuted to completion, said Superintendent of Streets, under the authority of said Board of Trustees first given, may make such repairs, construction, or reconstruction, or enter into a contract with any suitable person, at the expense of the owner, or occupant, after the specifications for the doing of such work shall have been conspicuously posted by him in his office for three (3) days, inviting bids for doing said work, which bids shall be delivered to him at his office on or before the date and hour to be set forth in said specifications for opening the same, and the contract for said work shall be awarded by him to the lowest responsible bidder, if in the judgment of said Superintendent of Streets the lowest bid therefor shall be reasonable; otherwise he shall reject all bids for such work, and invite new bids pursuant to the same procedure followed in the first instance. All of said bids shall be preserved in his office and open at all times after the letting of the contract to the inspection of the public. All such work shall be commenced within three (3) days after the execution of the contract therefor and completed without delay to the satisfaction of said Superintendent of Streets. Upon the completion of such work said Superintendent of Streets shall make and deliver to said successful contractor a certificate to the effect that said repairs, construction, or reconstruction, have been properly done to the satisfaction of said Superintendent of Streets, and that the charges for the same are reasonable and just. In the event that said work is not paid for within ten days from and after the completion and acceptance thereof, as aforesaid, and after the presentation of the bill therefor to the owner or owners, or the occupant, of the premises affected, said contractor shall make return in writing under oath to said Superintendent of Streets, reciting such facts, and upon the filing of such return endorsed by said Superintendent of Streets with the Assessor of said city, the amount due for said work, together with a penalty of twenty-five per cent of such amount, shall forthwith be, and become, a lien upon said premises, and shall be assessed against the same, and collected at the same time and in the same manner that municipal taxes are collected, and shall bear like penalties for delinquency. In such case said city upon the filing of said return, so endorsed, with said assessor, shall pay to said contractor, the actual contract price for said work.

In the event that any of such work is done by the Superintendent of Streets of said city the cost thereof shall be fixed by resolution of said Board of Trustees in accordance with the prevailing charges for similar work in the community, and the same shall be paid for in like manner as herein provided when the work is done by private contract; provided, however, that upon the filing of said return as aforesaid, the amount of the contract price for said work, together with a penalty of twenty-five per cent thereof, shall be due from the owner or owners of said premises affected, and shall be collected as in this ordinance prescribed in the case of private contracts.

Notice of the intention of said Board of Trustees to authorize the Superintendent of Streets to do or to order the doing of any of such work and fixing the time for hearing objections thereto shall be given in writing personally to the owner or owners, or occupants, of the premises affected, or conspicuously posted thereon, before any of such work is authorized.

Section 2. All ordinances and parts of ordinances, insofar as they conflict with this ordinance, are hereby repealed.

Section 3. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force thirty days from and after its final passage and approval.

PASSED AND ADOPTED by the Board of Trustees of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, this 4th day of October, 1926, by the following vote:

AYES: TRUSTEES: Jordan, Wood, Laronette, Dennis, Foster.
NOES: TRUSTEES: None.

Los Ranchitos Del Carmelo

SALES at Los Ranchitos already demonstrate that a new community is to come into being at the intersection of the Carmel Valley and Los Laureles roads — an ideal community, founded upon the plan of an ideal by the developers of Los Ranchitos, where there is bountiful sunshine and warmth all the year 'round, where there is plenty of room for an ideal country life in the quiet and peace of the most beautiful part of Carmel Valley — and yet only eleven miles, less than half an hour, from Ocean Avenue in Carmel. Los Ranchitos is a new thought in subdivisions — no "lots", no boulevards, no traffic thoroughfares.

You will find gates through which you may enter the property from the Los Laureles road and inspect the broad oak-covered "benches" of Los Ranchitos. Then for further information apply to

WILL CARMEL YIELD PLACE?

David C. Thomson in the London Mercury has a lovely bit of verse entitled "Yielding Place." In view of the rapid changes that have occurred in Carmel during the past few seasons, the cynically hopeless hope expressed by the Pine Cone that most of the streets of Carmel may yet be closed as traffic thoroughfares, and the enthusiasm that greeted Mr. Charles Cheney when he addressed residents of Carmel last Sunday on regional planning, this verse is printed herewith, with plenty of white space on both sides, so that it may be easily read:

They are building a new bridge over the river;
And the sweet air is full all day
Of the noise of riveting hammers
And cranes toiling away.

All day the old men from the village
Stand agape, with listless eyes,
On the old bridge, which has tasted
their time,
Watching the framework rise.

Of course, Carmel hasn't very many old men; and the climate of the Monterey Peninsula does not promote the listless eye. Nor are any great new bridges under contemplation in this vicinity. But in editorials, you know, even far-fetched analogies may be used when deemed appropriate, even as the mixed metaphor is sometimes called in to aid the faltering pen.

After all, Carmel is, admittedly, changing, and its old timers do rather stand by, critical of the new and growing, reminiscent of the old sweet air and the dear old days, but apparently powerless or unwilling to endeavor to exert the leadership which was once potent in their grasp. The village is making its stand against the city, without a general or even a captain, without a plan of campaign or a strategy for temporary salvation, without the opportunity even of withholding from its enemy any victory other than a Pyrrhic one.

Into this breach comes the one chance for success, which is the best, known form of opportunism—the regional plan advocated by Mr. Cheney and well received by the representative group of residents who attended the meeting last Sunday at Arts and Crafts hall. In this lies Carmel's opportunity to express its personality and to work out a plan—let us admit, a dream—to preserve its future along the lines that the present would ordain, in so far as that is possible. At least it may offer a plan for guidance, an ideal to shoot at, realizing as Carmel must realize today, that however different the ideals of the village have heretofore been from the ideals of its neighboring communities, economic laws and geographical expansion on the Monterey Peninsula are driving the three communities and the adjacent land developments in the making and in the planning, closer and closer together, so that the errors, the evils or the advantages of one are shared in some proportion by the others.

The regional plan gives the opportunity for the communities to idealize their future developments according to plan—to work from the ground before the ground is covered with buildings and other "improvements." It provides the scheme whereby subdividers may outline their divisions according to planned future highway, park and school needs. It offers the scope of work that makes for the coordination of the details that are taken up as the financial ability of the community and the needs of its growth make the work practical. It gives Carmel a voice in determining what is to go on outside the city limits of Carmel as well as within the city and an opportunity to do so in a scheme the main expense of which is borne by the larger municipal units and land holders.

The future of Carmel as a village where "small town" traditions are avoided lies in the intelligence and imagination that are devoted to its position at the present time. Had such a plan been broached and carried out six or eight years ago, great would be the gratitude today. It is time now to abandon the natural cussedness of kicking at what exists and bemoaning what may come, and to substitute in its place the plan for the most feasible idealization for the present and the near future. Perhaps even that cannot be attained, but it is worth striving for.

IMPROVISATION

By ROBERT ROE

The wash of seas
Is over me
And a long brown thunder
Of waters.

I tread the lights and glooms
Of old forests
Undergrown with shrubs.

By wild winds blown
The trees tumble over me
Thundering
With a wash of seas
And a deep rumble
Of waters.

NEW REEDS

By FAITH VILAS

(In Contemporary Verse)

Oh! Did you hear that Pan was wedded?
Some wood-nymph must have turned his head
I know, because, when all was still,
I heard young pipings on the hill,
And saw twin Pans, whose fingers strayed
Across slim reed-pipes, new made,
Within the round moon's silver track
I saw them clearly, back to back,
And heard them play soft, creeping bars
To the uncounted baby stars.

THEY ALSO SERVE—

By PAUL RAYSON

(In the New York Sun)

Somehow she made her helpfulness a sort
Of self-appointed slavery that proved Unsafe to lean on, dangerous to thwart.
Anticipating every need she moved
Softly before us, brushing things aside
Curing disorder with a patient hand,
Letting the sly rebuke of silence chide
A brusqueness she could never understand.
Women who serve and suffer and inspire
Not even half allegiance . . . on their bowed Shoulders they carry burdens that would tire
Atlas himself, but they are not so proud.
Theirs is the sort of helpfulness that drives
Good men to drink, perdition, or St. Ives!

If I Might Choose

By WHITE LAW SAUNDERS

(In The Lyric)

I would not die tonight,
With the moon upon the wheat
And the birch's shadowed loveliness
About my feet.

I would go when the wind,
Wearing a ragged shawl,
Sweeps the fallen leaves against
The garden wall.

Eleven Years Ago

Items Reprinted from the Carmel Pine Cone, Issue of October 6, 1915

Under the two column heading of "A Resident of Whom Carmel Should Be Proud" is printed an appreciation of Delos E. Goldsmith, who was referred to as "Carmel's Grand Old Man."

A birthday dinner had just been given in honor of Mr. Goldsmith, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Stewart, celebrating his 78th milestone. Mr. Goldsmith's great grandfather was Edward Goldsmith, brother of the author, Oliver Goldsmith.

Mr. Goldsmith came to Carmel in 1891 and assisted in the construction of the first houses built here. The houses of Miss Robertson, Miss M. E. Donnelly, the Berwick's and Joseph Sley, and also the hotel, were the first erected in Carmel. The Robertson house was the first dwelling occupied.

Another item on page one, carried the heading: Vote of Carmel Will Decide—Do you want Kibbler or the Editor-Candidate?

G. F. Beardsley, in a letter addressed to the Pine Cone, withdrew as candidate for trustee of the Monterey Union High School. This left W. T. Kibbler and W. L. Overstreet alone in the field. The race was becoming somewhat exciting. In the next issue we will be able to tell you who won the race. If you can't hold your patience until then, you have our permission to ask either Mr. Kibbler or Mr. Overstreet about it.

Corbett Grimes of Monterey was appointed mail carrier between Monterey and Big Sur, succeeding Charles Howland.

Under the caption of "Let Carmel Act" an editorial urged the erection of a "suitable appreciation" of William Shakespeare, whose tercentenary was about to be celebrated over America.

The board of trustees selected Mrs. Sydney Yead as librarian of Carmel Library.

The Editor contributed a brief

verse as follows:

"A Pine Cone is a useful thing,
Of paper or of wood.
It never did a bit of harm,
And frequently does good."

"Big Ben" alarm clocks were advertised by the Carmel Drug Store. We don't imagine they sold very well in Carmel which likes its morning slumber.

A report by the Carmel Library board for September was as follows: Books entered, 9; by gift, 3, by purchase 3; volumes in library, 2343; cardholders added 20, making a total of 2343.
Circulation: Fiction 265, non-fiction 33, juvenile 73, magazines 185.

PINE NEEDLES

Mrs. Eva K. DeSable is visiting in San Francisco.

Mrs. M. M. Tuttle and Miss Mary Osborn have returned from their exposition trip, and will remain here through October.

J. Edward Walker will return to his studio this week. He reports a good sale of his pictures in San Francisco.

Mrs. L. F. Turner will spend the winter at Anaheim. She departed last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Hillard and Mrs. J. R. Mason are home again. They had a grand time at the exposition.

Bonnie Hale and Philip Wilson, Jr. are on the staff of the "Green and Gold," Monterey High student paper.

C. O. Goold and family left yesterday for the city. They will do the exposition.

At the "European Market Day," given in aid of the starving Belgians, to be held at Palo Alto this coming Saturday, William Silva the Carmel artist, will sell fish from Monterey Bay. Mrs. K. G. Rentdorff and Mrs. J. C. L. Fish are also aiding in the affair.

PLAITS in the skirt, and fineness of the shoulder play fineness two ways in a frock of pistachio-green crepe de Chine with the collar and wristbands of a light shade of pinkish beige. This is an excellent type of dress for the business woman. You can make it of printed crepe de Chine which does not spot as readily as the plain colors, protect it in the office with a good-looking jacket and on the train or public conveyances with a straight coat of plain-colored crepe Roma. A fairly light blue and white polka-dot print frock with a navy blue jacket would have been a smart summer outfit.

Louvain Swamped as World's Books Come to Great Library

Louvain Library, to which Uncle Sam stands godfather, is developing problems.

Foremost is the question of how to complete the half finished gift of Americans to devastated Belgium, with money invested in Belgian bonds which cannot now be disposed of without an enormous loss on their face value. It may be years, as a result, before the million dollar library is completed.

Upkeep Fund in Bonds
Next is the problem of how to meet the upkeep of the completed unit with the interest on $125,000, also invested in Belgian bonds. Atop these considerations, citizens of the famous town are beginning to realize that the famous library is running away with them.

Where they once had a university specializing in theology, with a fine old theological library attached, they now possess one of the most important international libraries in the world, with a university attached which still specializes in theology. What effect the library is going to have on the university is the question they are asking.

Every Cranny Bulging

An unceasing flow of books comes to Louvain library from nations, societies and individuals in all parts of the world. From two to three thousand books arrive each month to swell the 600,000 already given. A staff of twelve works constantly at indexing and still thousands of volumes are uncataloged. Professor's attics, private libraries, and even commer-

Music Clubs Endow MacDowell's Cabin

Preservation of the log cabin workshop and the last resting place of Edward MacDowell, fa-

Federation of Music Clubs, "as an

Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley, president of the national federation, has announced a country-wide campaign among school children to obtain the $300,000 endowment fund begun for the purpose two years ago. Presentation of the endowment is planned for the biennial convention in Chicago, April 16 to 23.

The name of every child who contributes is to be read aloud, the officers have announced, "even though it takes more than a full day to do it."

Roads Now Complete At Deven Heights

The roads are now complete through Deven Heights, the scenic subdivision put on the market by Hogle and Mawdsley of Carmel, and located just below Highlands Inn on the coast highway. Every site in the tract now has easy and safe access by auto. This work will enable the owners to have water mains laid without hindrance as soon as they are needed for building purposes.

There are only eight sites left unsold in this tract and it is anticipated that a very harmonious colony of homes will be established there before long.

Two of the streets are particularly attractive—Van Es Way and Sonoma Lane. The homes on these two streets will enjoy the magnificent views on the coast line at Highlands. They start from the state highway and wind around Deven Heights to the bluff overlooking the Ocean.

RESIDENTS FAVOR REGIONAL PLAN

ped now for future building, and each subdivider should do his part.
"The state planning laws have become very drastic in the last few years, and some kind of a major street plan embracing the whole Peninsula should be made."

Cheney spoke in an interesting and instructive way on his experiences in zoning in other cities, and advised the community to make its own precedents. The unofficial committee will make a comprehensive park system, look after the water front and decide what rocky the public.

The effect of the meeting last Sunday places the question of Carmel's official participation in the regional plan up to the Carmel board of trustees, who now have it under consideration. Cheney stated that the extent of Carmel's financial cooperation amount to about $800, or one-third of the amount that Monterey has promised to devote to the work, according to the program of the old town's planning commission. Popular subscription in Carmel will probably reduce to about $500 the amount the trustees will have to appropriate. The money devoted to the work will be used for map-making, surveying, blue prints and other matters that entail unavoidable costs. Both the Del Monte Properties company and the Misses L. M. and V. Jacks have pledged $1,000 each for furthering the work. It is reported that Pacific Grove business and property interests are actively in favor of the Grove entering the plan officially as well.

There were over forty well known Carmel residents at the meeting last Sunday, among whom were Mrs. Edward Kluegel, Mr. and Mrs. David Ball, Dr. and Mrs. Larry Towet, Dr. Amelia Gates, Fenton P. Foster, John Jordan, George L. Wood, Miss F. M. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Adams, Miss Kessam
Johnson, William Silva, Mrs.
Maude Aradt, Clay Otto, Ray De
Yoe, Captain Offley and William Overstreet.

Invite Antiques For Historical Loan Exhibits

Days of the tallow candle, the flint-lock musket and the quilted petticoat, of the covered wagon and its sparse content of household treasures are to live again in the Historical Loan Exhibition to be shown by the Los Angeles Museum at Exposition Park during November and December. It is well known that many objects of historical interest and value are to be found locally, where they form highly prized exhibits in private collections. It is believed that not alone in such collections, but hidden away in storage places and forgotten in odd corners there may be discovered a surprising store of significant treasures.

Out of some garret what historic newspaper, ancient snuff-box, or rifle carried by a pioneer ancestor may not emerge? What unsuspected store of relics—a table upon which Washington signed his undying name, a bed in which Rio Pico himself may have slept, the beautiful old bedspread designed and woven by great-grandmother, the hand-wrought silver teapot, the colonial great-grandfather bought in lieu of depositing his money in a bank—may not be brought to light to instruct and entertain; to intrigue the antiquarian and student.

Especially desired for exhibition are possessions about which owners can provide authentic historical data, or which are conspicuous for their historical associations, but objects known to be genuinely antique although not covered with the glamour of famous associations will be welcomed for their own sakes. Every piece will silently present its story, and in telling it, explain something of the interests, influences and arts in the lives of our ancestors. This is the purpose of this exhibition—to present as extensive a group of American historical objects as possible, that from them there may be drawn a more complete understanding of the social and economic aspects of our American history, too often held in mind as simply a series of political events to the exclusion of the thought that American history is the story of American people, who have left in these objects of personal and daily use the touch of personalities, ideas, occupations and enthusiasms of other days.

The aim of the exhibition is to bring together from private collections, dealers and any available source, all objects relating to American and Californian history prior to the Civil War which may be found in this vicinity. Articles antedating the Civil War from any section of the United States will be considered for exhibition, and it is planned to make the early California and Southwest sections of especial significance. Many of the miscellaneous personal and household possessions which must have been carried along with the great tide of the westward movement must still be extant today, in the hands of sons and daughters of the pioneer families who built up this thrilling and amazing story not only with their imaginations, but with their lives. Of all these things, the museum wishes to bring together as many as possible, to secure one dramatic and exceptional view of the ensemble of historical material which this city can provide. Such an event will be an opportunity of rare occasion to the student, collector, historian, artist, to school children, and to every appreciative member of the community. For its success the cooperation of every interested member of the community is requested.

Articles which will be shown will include old furniture (cottage, household and farmhouse), old china, glass, pewter, brass, silver, copper, old paintings, pictures and prints, old laces, needlework and fabrics, miniatures, jewelry and trinkets, pottery and earthenware, old clocks and watches, books, newspapers, letters and autographs, household curios, domestic and agricultural implements and other old personalia of every description. Any individual or society able to supply information as to the location of such material or willing to loan possessions is requested to communicate with the museum at once by personal visit, letter or telephone. Articles for exhibition will be received at the Los Angeles Museum, Exposition Park, any time up to October 25, and in cases where it is inconvenient for owners to deliver loans, careful transportation will be arranged.

GARDEN OF GODS

Had I aviated to the trans-earthly?

There were blue lipins and golden popples that ran down sloping hills straight into the sea, which lay like a vast carpet of glass in a Mansion of Air. By the subtle necromancy of this stray and curious bit of nature, you are penetrated immediately by the spirit of the place. Along with the ecstasy of nerve and blood, you feel something old, weird, uncanny. Poesque, Chopinesque take possession of your being. Something remote, forbidden, infernal is mixed with glamor and brightness. And this is no mere fancy, as I was to learn for Carmel-by-the-Sea simply polulates with strange legends of Indian and old Spanish days, and the natives and the artists of this region have as strange tales to tell as were ever told in old Mexico.

It was more than forty years ago that Robert Louis Stevenson settled at Monterey. His home—a little white two-story affair—is the show-spot of Montereyites and Carmelites. The great Bohemian must have roved this Carmel coast many a time. What stories would have flowed from his pen had he elected to settle in Carmel Valley and become impregnated with its legends! But this was not in the decree of the gods. R. L. S. deserted the Carmel country for the South Seas, leaving the wild waste to be taken over by three other poets—Ambrose Bierce, George Sterling and Robinson Jeffers.

The visits of Bierce and Sterling together to Carmel-by-the-Sea have become legendary among the writers and printers there. In a way, they are the patron saints (the word "saints" always to be accompanied with a satiric smile) of the place. Sterling and Bierce in those days were the playboys of California.

Sterling, now by common consent the uncrowned poet-laureate of California, and guide, philosopher and friend to all visiting world literateurs to San Francisco, still spends nearly half of his time at Carmel. His old friend Bierce having disappeared as mysteriously from the world of men as Charley Ross, he romps the wilds with Robinson Jeffers, the austere poet of tragic beauty in the Herculean body of a Paul Bunyan.

There is a silent prayer of thanksgiving offered up each night by those who have made Carmel-by-the-Sea their own, especially by the sons and daughters of Muses and magazines that Carmel-by-the-Sea does not grow very fast. I can well understand that the natural beauty on this strip of coast is so "different" from ordinary conceptions of natural beauty and holds such curious psychic reactions in its retorts of air, sea and earth that the average person would be repelled by it—for which many thanks, says George Sterling.—Benjamin de Casseres in New York Herald-Tribune.

S. K. Ratcliffe, the English editor, will deliver next year's Bromley lectures at Yale University, and these will be published later in book form under the title, "The Press." Mr. Ratcliffe will discuss the changes which have taken place in journalism on both sides of the Atlantic, and will say something of the great journalists he has known and worked with, including T. P. O'Connor, Lord Northcliffe and W. T. Stead.

A book of "Reminiscences of Transatlantic travelers" has been written by Charles Spedding, for many years purser of the Aquitania. Both in this ship and in other Cunard liners the author has met a succession of celebrities, and he has many stories to tell of those and other personalities. We wonder if he tells all he knows concerning those many trips. We wonder.

Will Jacks Sells Carmel Valley Land

A 1,500 acre fishing and hunting preserve in the Carmel Valley has been sold by Will Jacks, Monterey, to George S. Gould, Salinas realtor. It was announced yesterday. The acreage, said to be among the finest recreational areas in the state, lies along the San Clemente and Pineda creeks. It is believed that Gould made the purchase for a southern California club, although he says it was made as an investment.

Neither of the principals would disclose the price paid for the land, but it is said the transaction involved a considerable sum.

Just rolling along with PRINCE ALBERT

AND having a wonderful time! Yes, Sir. P. A. makes the finest cigarette that ever took form in your fingers. Easier to roll. This tobacco is crimp-cut, which means that you don't need a scoop or a broom to take up the spillage. P. A. stays put in the papers. This is just an item, of course. The taste's the thing.

Just get yourself a tidy red tin of Prince Albert today and get going with some of these masterful cigarettes. You'll find them cool. You'll find them sweet. You'll find them fragrant, as you roll them, and as you smoke them. Delightfully fragrant.

You never weary of rolling and smoking them. The reason for all of this is the wonderful quality of the tobacco. Prince Albert has no near-relatives. Not even a second-cousin. To get the most out of a home-rolled cigarette, you must get Prince Albert. That's a prescription—and a promise!

Pipe-smokers, too, know the joys of a jimmy-pipe packed with P. A. They'll tell you that P. A. does things to a pipe—makes it perform in a way a good pipe should. No matter how settled you think you are, if you don't know Prince Albert, you don't know complete pipe-joy.

P. A. is sold everywhere. And always with every bit of bite and punch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Stock Company Tries Out Play of D. Totheroh

Stuart Walker's Stock Company tried out "Daughters of Music," Dan Totheroh's new play, in Cincinnati last week. Totheroh's play, "Wild Birds" will be pleasantly remembered, and the young author spent some time in Carmel immediately after its presentation in San Francisco and at the Little Theatre of the University of California. The Cincinnati Enquirer has this to say about "Daughters of Music": "The frivolous young daughters of music, modern jazz hounds as the author labels them, have been brought to a low estate in the Totheroh play, who has gone to the Bible for his text, but has left it for the highways and byways of a jazz ridden rural community, where long nosed reformers seek to hound a defenseless girl out of town, in order to cover up the escapades of the sons and daughters of influential citizens."

"Hay Fever" Should Not Disappoint Theatre Audience

H. W. A.
"Hay Fever," Noel Coward's great London and New York success, will be presented by George Ball at the Arts and Crafts Theatre tonight, and tomorrow night. This is one of the real comedies of the day, for, in addition to his ability to write real comedy, Noel Coward is diabolically clever. His dialogue is rich in humor, and sometimes has a sharp shaft that hits home. Occasionally we feel that Mr. Coward has nothing to say, but he says it so well and so cleverly that we forgive him and wait for his next line.
In "Hay Fever" he gives us—not the typical English family—but a family that would be noticeable anywhere in America or England for its originality. The mother, around whom the family really revolves, is a retired "queen of the stage," who intends having at least one more farewell performance. All the others play up to her at all times, and their sense of the dramatic is always on tap. The father is a successful author, and the two children, Sorrell and Simon, are quite clever, though sometimes annoyingly so. But they do play up to one another, and before a heterogeneous group of week and guests they put on one of their famous family parties; and the story of the week and makes the play. It's irresistibly amusing, and George Ball has a competent cast working. We find Marian Todd, Gladys Vander Roest, Sally Maxwell, Eleanor Watson, Helen Judson, Barry Parker, Bill Williams, Eugene Watson and Robert Roe all in the one cast. We expect a good show and shall not be disappointed.

First Lecture By Cowell Details History of Music

On Monday night, in the Denny and Watrous Studio, Henry Cowell gave his first lecture on Modern Music, taking up the history of music. There was a good attendance at the lecture, and Mr. Cowell explained in detail the history of the modern movement in music. He showed that it is not a modern development, that since the fifteenth century musicians who have departed from the beaten path have been reviled by critics in almost the same terms. There has always been a division between composers, the ultra-modern and the conservative, and in the annals of music it is the ultra-moderns of the time who have survived and come down through ages.
When Mr. Cowell was in Europe he read the actual words of the critics of those times about Mozart, Hayden, Beethoven and Wagner. Always the same thing was said, in different words maybe, but the thought was similar. For instance, one usually found the words "no harmony," "no rhythm," and "confused."
Our earliest musical critic to write of the ultra-modern times was probably Plato. In those days the music was mostly vocal, and always voice alone ruled in the great concerts of the time. One day some young musicians introduced an instrumental group, of which Plato says: "The young modern poets are fond of mixed rhythm and inconsistent measure. They attempt to separate rhythm from form, and form from melody, and melody from words. Where there are no words the result will always be confused and brutish noise, and this leads to every sort of inconsistent trickery."

"Honor Thy Wife" and Win Fifty Dollars in Contest

"Honor Thy Wife," produced by the Dansk Film Industri, Palladium, Copenhagen, Denmark, will be shown at the Golden Bough Theatre next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, and an opportunity for residents of the Peninsula to earn fifty dollars by writing subtitles to the picture, which will be shown without them, is offered. Those who intend to try their hand at sub-titling will, on the night of their first attendance at the picture, enter their names in the contest and will then be given a card that will entitle them to a free admission at all subsequent showings.
Titles should be submitted on a sheet, or sheets, of paper that contain no other writing whatsoever. The name of the contestant should be written on a separate piece of paper and enclosed with the subtitles. Manuscripts should be addressed to the Theatre of the Golden Bough and must be in the hands of the management no later than Tuesday, October 9. Private showings for contestants will be on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, 15, 16, and 17, afternoons at 4 p.m.

Press opinions, in French only, of "Honor Thy Wife," stress the masterly acting, the admirable simplicity and the psychological verity of the picture. It is declared a masterpiece in scenario, direction and photographic perfection. It is stated that the pantomime and the sequences are so adroitly carried out that titles are unnecessary. To conform to the American custom, however, the importer desires to equip the film with subtitles, and to that end has offered $50 for the best set of subtitles and captions submitted by a resident of this Peninsula.
The judges will be Thomas D. Van Osten, editor of the Pacific Coast Independent Exhibitor; Carol Nathan, Pacific Coast Manager for the Universal Film Exchanges; and M. S. Vidaver, publicity manager for the Louis Greenfield Theatres.

Masonic Club Has Minstrel Show to Be Thankful For

The Carmel Masons, who have their own club, promise a "big attraction" for the Thanksgiving holiday week—a minstrel show that is to be staged at the Arts and Crafts theatre. Several of the big guns in local theatrical work have been enlisted to take part in the show, and new songs, new local jokes, a fine orchestra and "stunts galore" are all pledged in advance. The performance is promised as a compensation for the omission of the Carmel Follies this year.

Danish Comedy to Be Presented Here

Ole and Axel, the Mutt and Jeff of Denmark, will be seen at the Golden Bough Sunday and Monday nights in one of their hilarious film comedies, called in this country "Misplaced Highbrows." These two comedians are famous throughout Europe but as yet they are practically unknown in America. The Danish humor and sense of the ridiculous are no less infectious than ours, and "Misplaced Highbrows" will undoubtedly call forth both amusement and interested comment. The Golden Bough again requests that written expressions of opinion, whether favorable or otherwise, on the imported pictures being shown, be mailed to the Theatre. These comments are forwarded to the importer in San Francisco and the amount of enthusiasm and interest shown therein directly influences him in determining the number of American premieres of imported pictures he will allow to take place at the Theatre of the Golden Bough.

What of Rocket to Arm Flavin?

Apropos of the closing scene of "The Children of the Moon" at the Arts and Crafts Theatre the other night, if the plan to start an eleven seater rocket from Russia succeeds, Martin Flavin can re-write his play, or rather the ending of it, and have his hero take the moon-mad daughter of the Athertons to call on the Emperor in comparative safety.
We have no news as to whether the rocket has really started yet according to plan. It is an adventure, the rest of the world will watch with mingled feelings. On the one hand it will be a relief to have even eleven fewer Bolsheviks on earth. On the other, a Communist moon will be a fine advertisement for Moscow.

Griffith Film At Golden Bough

"Sally of the Sawdust," a comedy-drama of circus life, will be shown at the Golden Bough Friday and Saturday nights. This picture is Griffith in a gay mood, working with his infinite skill and patience in material that is pure entertainment, without theme or moral—merely the drift of laughter and pathos among fascinating people—but knitted into a quick story. Carol Dempster plays the lead, supported by W. C. Fields, who plays the part of juggler and rogue extraordinary. "Sally of the Sawdust" is released by United Artists.

World Wonders

By WINSON JOSSELYN

Old Al stood in the barber shop doorway and looked gloomily out at the traffic on Ocean Avenue. "Ain't it a shame," he said to the barber, who sat in a chair leaning back against the vined front of the shop, "that they're goin' to have a street car runnin' right down the middle of this here Avenue?"

The barber brought his chair abruptly forward and turned a hard eye on the bearded town crier in the doorway.

"Yep, that's what I hear," went on Uncle Al. "Course, it ain't down in black and white in the newspapers yet. But whether it's true or not, the folks here ain't takin' any chances, and I understand they're gettin' out a petition to stop it. Don't matter what happens, a petition is sure to hob up. And next thing you know, there's a petition against the petition and like as not the same folks sign each one, just to be agreeable."

The barber shop's little white dog, by name Nero, walked unconcernedly through a rush of traffic and shunted past Al into the cool of the shop's interior.

"Bet Nero has a tough time makin' the street car stop for him like these here autos do," observed Al. "Like as not th' motorman will swear at him terrible, and I've noticed that nothin' makes Nero madder'n bel'n' swore at by strangers."

"Seems as how the car itself is goin' to be covered with pine boughs to make it sort of artistic lookin' and not hurt th' landscape for the artist folks. Track is goin' to be narrow gauge so's they won't have to cut down any more trees than necessary. Yep, the company's goin' to do all it can to make it popular, even to namin' the car after some famous Carmelite. But say, I hope they don't name it Almee, because it'd get so crowded that . . ."

He broke off and suddenly turned around. Nero had gotten hold of the gourd pipe that had been left on the guest chair and was gnawing noisily at it.

"Hi there, you!"

Old Al took two steps and put ten fingers onto Nero's fat body.

Nero retaliated by putting two rows of white teeth together onto Al's near hand. The harder Al gripped, the harder the teeth pressed, and it was only when he relaxed his fingers that Nero, wise in the knowledge of human beings, let go his biters in turn. The pipe was picked up and carefully examined and rubbed with apprehensive palm.

An exclamation from the barber outside brought both Al and Nero to the door. An active young man was pedaling past on a bicycle. On his head was a brown derby that bore the letters: "B.D.C.C. of D.M."

"By golly," said Al, "if it ain't Harrison Godwin. I'd heard about that there new club he belongs to. The Brown Derby Cycle Club of Del Monte, that's what they call it. Them society folks is always thinkin' up new things to do, ain't they?"

And he and Nero and the barber stood and watched Harrison pump up the street and out of sight.

Louisa May Alcott's "An Old-Fashioned Girl," with eight illustrations in color by Elenore Abbott, and Harriet A. Nash's "Polly's Secret," illustrated by Hattie Longstreet Price, have been added by Little, Brown & Co. to their Beacon Hill Bookshelf series.

out, or find time hanging heavily on their hands. As Mr. Beaumont remarked, "We are out to sell the Peninsula, these people must be made to like it, and it is a big job we have on our hands, for this is the first time any community as small as this has ever tried to swing a convention. It usually goes to a city about the size of Sacramento. But we will show them, for I said we ate a convention for breakfast down here, another for lunch, and in the afternoon arranged a third one."

The Carmel women who are on Miss Cooke's committee are Mrs. L. A. Shipley, Mrs. Maude Hogle, Miss Elizabeth Whyte, Mrs. Ray C. DeYoe, Mrs. Yodice Remson, Mrs. Arthur Shand, Mrs. John Jordan, Mrs. Fenton Foster, Mrs. Robert Stanton, Mrs. Sara Deming, Mrs. Paul Prince, Mrs. Rose DeYoe, Mrs. Daisy Bostick, Mrs. Helen Mueh. There are not many committees that have to do with the forthcoming realtors' convention at Del Monte, that do not have well known Carmel real estate operators in their ranks.

A list of those who will be harried from sunup to sundown when the 1500 delegates and their parties arrive shows Ray C. DeYoe as General Chairman for the State convention committee, and other committee members as follows: Ladies' entertainment, Katherine Cooke, chairman; finance committee, Edward Tickle and Peter Mawdsley; registration committee, Calvin Hogle; hotel committee, Harrison Godwin, R. C. DeYoe and Edward Tickle; local preparation and decoration, Tickle and DeYoe; stunts and music, Harrison Godwin; caravan and automobiles, Robert Stanton and James Doud; reception committee, DeYoe and Godwin. How some of them will figure on two or more committees is a matter none appear ready to explain.

Last Wednesday night the last meeting of the Monterey Peninsula realty board, preparatory to the convention, was held in the tower room at Hotel Del Monte, and it is stated that all is ready for the kick-off, when the caravans of realty boosters arrive.

The most interesting event promised for the week is the "Home Town Contest," to be staged at the Grove Theatre, in which speakers entered from various communities will vie with oratory—five minute limit—for a loving cup that is annually presented for the one who best sells his town to the critical audience. No notes are allowed, no seconds may be split over the five minute mark, no phrases may be repeated, and the audience must re-act. Despite these conditions there are plenty of competitors.

On Thursday night the annual banquet is held for the realtors and their families, public not invited. Friday night the convention has

Thomas Hardy Spends Twilight of Life on Poetry, Author's First Love

Thomas Hardy, the aged dean of English literature, continues to write regularly despite the infirmities which 86 years are wont to produce.

He is spending the twilight of his life at his home here in penning poetry—the first love of his youth. With the fiction which made him famous he is probably finished.

May Never Publish

Daily the venerable author retires to write his verse in the quiet, sunlit study where during the last forty years he has produced some of the world's greatest literature. Just what he is writing is not divulged, as he is offering nothing for publication. Whether the poems ever will be given to the world is a matter which has not been decided.

Mr. Hardy is at present writing for himself and his wife, and mayhap for a few old and cherished friends.

The Hardy residence nestles amidst this lovely, rolling countryside, the setting of many of his great works. Forty years ago he planned the comfortable, red brick and stone home in which he has since lived. He called it Max Gate.

About the house he created gardens and planted trees to suit his own fancy. He is a great lover of nature, and in his enthusiasm he set out so many trees that he created a "forest primeval." The house sits well back from the Dorchester Road and is shut off from public view by the trees.

Among Birds and Trees

Max Gate is surrounded on three sides by the Duchy of Cornwall, which is now owned by the present Prince of Wales. The young prince and the aged writer are great friends.

Mr. Hardy receives comparatively few visitors these days, for he is getting feeble. Nor does he venture far from home, but takes little walks about his estate, and sometimes steps out for a bit onto the quiet country roads leading either to Dorchester or Wool. He likes to be about among his trees and flowers, and especially enjoys the bird life on his grounds. For years he has made his place as nearly a bird sanctuary as possible. Not long ago he himself helped to fix numerous bird houses among the trees, and he feeds his feathered friends regularly.

Mrs. Hardy, who is younger, has long played the part of amanuensis for her husband. She is a woman of great culture and is herself a writer, but not for publication—at least for the present.

Wife is Business Agent

"As a general thing, I do not believe that the wives of famous authors should attempt to write," said Mrs. Hardy. "They should be satisfied to assist their husbands and be content with the reflected glory."

"It seems to me that the wife of a great writer makes herself appear foolish if she rushes into print—that is, unless she herself is a genius. I am not a genius."

Mrs. Hardy looks after her husband's business affairs. Just recently she was engaged in assisting John Drinkwater prepare for the production of "The Mayor of Casterbridge," which Mr. Drinkwater dramatized from the famous Hardy novel of that name. But the aged author did not concern himself with the production of the play. He is too busy with his poems, his birds, his trees and his dreams.

its stunts and the president's ball, various communities contributing musical contests and other features of the program. The Santa Monica Band, of course, is always on hand.

The convention of the California real estate association is not only by far the largest ever held on the Monterey Peninsula, but is considered the most important annual convention in the state.

With the final week before the convention drawing to a close, every indication points to a re-resentation of California Realtors in excess of 1500. This figure, according to General Chairman Wm. C. Keim, was the attendance goal set by his committee months ago, and with its achievement the 22nd annual convention of the California Real Estate Association at Del Monte will go on record as the largest event of its kind ever held in the west.

Los Angeles and San Francisco, the two largest cities in the state, have both reported reservations far in excess of their original quotas. "Statewide interest," asserted Keim "is at fever heat, and record delegations from every board city are assured."

Peninsula Artists and Their Work

Prominent Local Artists Show at Del Monte Gallery

The Del Monte Arts Gallery is showing some interesting and lovely paintings this month, by a representative group of Monterey Peninsula artists. William Ritchel has a portrait there of an old Spaniard, the face is very fine and thoughtful, and a gay scarf around the neck picks up a bright bit of color. Ritchel is planning to leave in the next few weeks for New York, where he will hold an exhibition.

Jessie Botke has one of the loveliest decorative pieces on view. It is called "The Mirror," and shows a white peacock with tail wide spread, standing preening on the edge of a flat garden pool. Across from the peacock is a white goose, and several colorful pheasants disport themselves nearby. The subject is of rare interest, and done with all of the charm that Mrs. Botke puts in her work.

Evelyn McCormick of Monterey is showing several of her adobe houses, warm with sunlight, with a Mission Cross in front. It has all the charm of old Monterey. A. W. Darrow has a painting of a sail boat on a cold and angry green sea, and Gottardo Piazoni shows a high hillside with a plowed field in the foreground, demonstrating the hardness and brilliance of his conception of a landscape.

William C. Watts has one of his Indian water colors here, with a train of laden camels in front of an Oriental pagoda, brilliant with all the tints a tropic sun is prone to bring out in any building. It is a beautiful piece of work, with the drawing particularly well done.

Lester Boronda, who is a member of an old Spanish family in Monterey, was on the Peninsula this summer, and has several oil paintings in the Del Monte Gallery. One study of an oak tree is delightful, and the portrait of his small daughter shows her in an old fashioned flowered dress, with a wide white lace ruff. It contains all the charm of the old portraits one sees in the European galleries. Another shows two Spanish ladies before a door in an adobe house. It is full of beautiful color and fine tones.

The gallery well repays a visit, the lighting is good, and the pictures cleverly arranged to show to the best advantage.

ART DEALERS NOW RENT NOTED WORKS TO MOVIES

The demand for authentic detail in modern motion picture production has opened a new source of revenue for art dealers who are now renting fine paintings for use as wall decorations in elaborate movie sets.

The companies are charged one per cent of the valuation of the picture per week. An original Sir Peter Lely, portrait of a lady, was valued at $5,000 and rented at $50 a week. One company this year used a Rembrandt rented from the Clark Collection, a Granier still-life, a Blakelock landscape, Raeburn and Mettling portraits and what was represented to be a true Franz Hals. The latter rented for fifty-five dollars.

Sherlock Holmes is to be brought to life again by Conan Doyle, despite the fact that he announced some two years ago that he would devote his entire time to psychical research. Perhaps, however, he considers this reincarnation of his great detective as another experiment in that subject. In any event, his hero appeared in a new series of stories in the weekly magazine, Liberty, beginning September 18.

Coleman's Work Has Great Appeal

There is a directness about the paintings that Ray Clarkson Coleman is exhibiting in the foyer of the Golden Bough this week, that has a very great appeal. Every picture seems to carry its own story, its own interpretation to the viewer. His color of the sea is different from that of most artists, and with realism he combines a touch of almost unreal beauty.

The sea he has painted in all her moods, but most successfully I think, in a canvas showing the sunset light on the jade green breakers, with a rocky joint in the foreground. The golden radiance of this picture is a delight. Then there is another painting of a group of trees at dusk, showing a great talent for color. His draughtsmanship is always distinguished, and his use of color, say in one painting of three wind-blown trees with water and the yellow hills beyond is well proportioned.

Coleman's desert pictures are very interesting. They give us, in stately design, masses of natural architecture and wide wastes of yellow sand. But it is his pictures of the sea that people return to, for in some of them he has caught that almost divine light that we are fortunately able to see on clear evenings on this coast.

Miss Morgan and Kays Mentioned By Gene Hailey

Gene Hailey, writing in the San Francisco Chronicle has this to say about Kays.

"Kays' Shop in Carmel is a story book place well adapted to one-man shows. During October they are showing tempera and oil sketches by Miss deNeale Morgan, who is the patron saint of Carmel painters and has done more cypresses, sand dunes and pine trees, wind and wave swept, sun and fog bathed, than any woman painter in Carmel. Her work has progressed in understanding and in scope very much since her first inspirations in that hallowed sketching ground."

University Receives Rare Old Volume

A copy of the only French translation of Sir Isaac Newton's "Principia" ever made, from the hand of Madame du Chatelet, the only woman ever associated with the publication of Newton's famous book, has just been received by the University of California library as a gift from Regent J. K. Moffitt.

The book was printed in the eighteenth century. Madame du Chatelet was a close friend of Voltaire and a poem by this famous writer is included in the edition as an eulogy on Newton. Madame du Chatelet ranked high as a mathematician and was awarded prizes by the French Academy of Sciences for scientific work. In addition, she has the distinction of having carried on a correspondence with Frederick the Great of Prussia and of having endeavored to win him over to the Newtonian explanation of the phenomena of our solar system.

"The Children's Own Book of Letters and Stories," every letter, poem, play and story in it being the classroom production of a child under 14 years of age, will be published soon by Marshall Jones & Company. The editor is Marie Burbank Harding of the Woodward School in Boston.

Many Local Artists Exhibiting at the Carmel Art Gallery

This month's hanging at the Carmel Art Gallery includes many interesting studies. "Cypress and Silver Sea" by M. DeNeale Morgan is attracting much attention. Cornelius Botke's "The Golden Hour," C. Chapel Judson's "The Duet," a charming bit of Belgium scenery, Ferdinand Burdorf's "Venus," Harold Knott's "Sea Foam," Jessie Arms Botke's "The Swans," Elizabeth Strong's "From Hilltop Point Lobos," a study of wild buckwheat and blue sea, Myron Oliver's "Blossoming May," and George Koch's "Morning Surf" are among the exhibits. Included in the smaller pictures are three attractive water colors by Miss H. C. Brown, Alan Cram's black and white, and three small oil paintings by May Fenn.

The Carmel Art Gallery is conducted by Mrs. Harriet Stoddard.

U. C. Student Finds Unique Carvings

A collection of American Indian bone carvings unlike anything previously unearthed anywhere, which were dug up this summer in a cremation pit on an island in the Deschutes River, Oregon, have just been brought back to the University of California Museum of Anthropology by Julian Haynes Steward, graduate student on the Berkeley campus.

Preliminary studies of the material failed to account for the carvings, either their purpose or the origin of the strange designs used. The majority of the specimens are replicas of human figures engraved on flat bone. They differ chiefly from the usual Pacific Coast Indian art products in the care shown in the work, in the style of representing the features of the face and in the presence of an unexplainable cone projecting from the head of each carved figure.

To the casual observer the carvings have a curious similarity to those of ancient Egypt, though there is no possibility of any connection; and the facial expression resembles that of a death-mask. In practically every case the tongue is shown hanging out of the mouth and the ribs are indicated with heavy lines, giving a further appearance of death or starvation.

It is thought that the remains are not very old, as copper beads, glass beads and European copper buttons were found with them. Some years ago a bone carving similar to those found by Steward was uncovered by an archaeologist, Harlan Smith, in the Yakima Valley, above the Deschutes River and the Miller Island site.

Further interest in the material is aroused by the presence of copper buttons, probably originally intended for uniforms, inscribed with the French expression, "Je Renais de Mes Cendres," which means, translated liberally, "I arise from my ashes."

Each button has on it, also, an individual number—in the case of those just found, 4, 20, and 28. Some time ago another of these buttons was found in southern California among Indian remains. What the significance of the buttons may be or how such evidences of French influence reached the coast is not definitely known as yet. An attempt will be made to find mention of them in historical accounts of early trading posts.

The manuscript of another romantic novel by E. Barrington is now in her publisher's hands. For the heroine she has chosen Cleopatra and for her title "The Laughing Queen."

Literary Giants in England Grind Away

There seems to be no limit to the industry of England's veteran literary giants.

H. G. Wells is grinding out a three-volume novel. Arnold Bennett is about to launch a new romance. Rudyard Kipling, recovered from his serious illness, has another book of short stories ready for his public.

Bernard Shaw, having celebrated his seventieth birthday, is hard at work again, lecturing and writing. John Galsworthy's new play is a success in London—and he insists it is not necessarily his last dramatic work. Besides his plays, Galsworthy has the fortunes of the Forsyth family to look after, and has turned out another novel about them.

There is an introduction by Lord Buckmaster to a book, "Working Days," by Margaret Pollock, who seeks to give the public an insight into the lives and thoughts of some of the millions of men and women engaged in British industry.

The original publishers of "Pickwick" are commemorating the centenary of the travels of the Pickwick Club (it was in 1827 that the Pickwickians set forth on their journey) by an illustrated record entitled "Mr. Pickwick's Pilgrimage," by Walter Dexter. The book, which will be ready soon, describes the topography of the tour.

And still they come, the biographies of George Washington. The author of the latest is Joseph Dillaway Sawyer, and his work, which will contain a thousand illustrations of scenes and persons closely associated with the Father of His Country, will be issued next month by the Macmillan Company.

Out of the lot!

NO need to argue quality when you can taste it, nor to prove popularity when you can see it!

Out of the whole lot, men pick Chesterfield for its tobacco character and its natural good taste. Every bit of its enormous growth has been earned by its taste, and by that alone!

It's pretty clear from Chesterfield's record that good tobaccos can speak for themselves.

The plot of Ludwig Diehl's novel, "The Sardonian Smile," to be published shortly by Houghton Mifflin Company, is based on the life of Heine. The English translation is by Louise C. Wilcox.

Over 3,000 cities and towns have streets paved with portland cement concrete

Horse-and-Buggy Pavements Won't Do

Property owners in many towns and cities whose streets swarm with motor traffic are still wasting their money on horse-and-buggy "pavements" of bygone days.

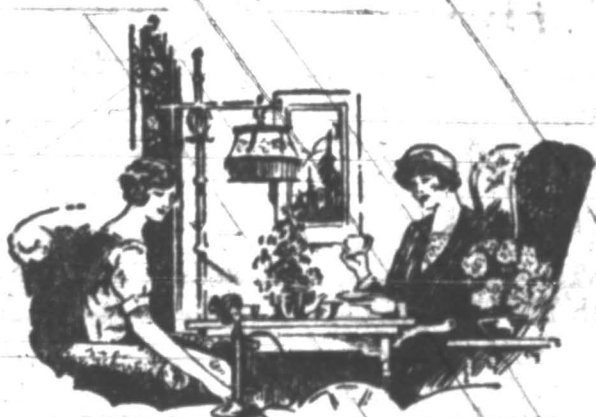

These rough, bumpy streets are directly responsible for broken springs, cut tires, greater depreciation of cars, physical discomfort, loss of time, and many accidents involving loss of life or limb.

And the heavy expense of trying to keep worn-out, dangerous, horse-and-buggy streets in repair, added to their original cost, amounts to more than enough to pay for true, even, non-skid concrete pavement that has the maintenance built in.

So in the long run you are paying for concrete streets. Why not get them?

All of the facts are in our free booklet on "Concrete Streets." Ask for your copy

BUSINESS judgment BROUGHT HOME

YOUNG Mrs. Wellford was talking about her husband's recent illness.

"Bill was home for a whole week. It was his first real chance to see me in action as a housewife—we've been married only a year, you know."

"The third day he said to me: 'Sally, you need an Extension Telephone. You're wearing yourself out, running up and down stairs and from room to room every time the telephone rings. I never realized before how much a woman will put up with without complaining. I wouldn't stand for it a minute in my office.'" (Wellford's Inn was a model office.)

"And so?" said her visitor.

"There it is," said Sally proudly.

An Extension Telephone costs only a few cents a week.

LEARNED WOMEN EVIDENCE THEY CAN COMBINE CAREERS, MOTHERHOOD

Whether women can combine a professional career with the duties of wife and mother has been a moot question in London since the learned women, chiefly single, gave the ball another sprightly fling at the University Women's conference in Amsterdam.

Opponents of women entering the learned professions in the old fashioned days used to argue that neither the brains nor the bodies of women were equal to the strain. But it has been brought out in England that nearly all medical women appear to have found no difficulty in combining their exacting professions with marriage and motherhood.

View Of Woman Doctor

Women of science, however, are too scientific to think much of matrimony. This was brought home at Oxford during the meeting of the British Association, there being but one or two married women who participated in the discussions relating to science.

Dr. Mary Scharlieb, dean of British Medical Women, considers that marriage and motherhood are great assets to women doctors. "Such women," says Dr. Scharlieb, "have first hand knowledge of the physiology and psychology of women such as no other doctor can possess."

Doctor Scharlieb is herself a notable example. She married a barrister early in her career and her three children achieved good positions—one as a school-master, the second as a medical practitioner, and the third as a medical woman. She is no exception. Other women doctors in Hartley Street are wives and mothers.

In Field Of Science

Madam Curie is a brilliant exception to the women of science whose marriage stimulated her studies and led to the discovery of radium. With the great French woman may be classed the late Lady Huggins, whose youthful interest in the stars developed into a partnership in study and discovery after her marriage to the great astronomer, Sir William Huggins.

The woman novelist is not dependent on martial experience in portraying passion. Intuition taught Jane Austen the secrets of the heart, as did the three Bronte Sisters, if Charlotte's brief year of married life, during which she undoubtedly was handicapped by her clerical husband and ceased to write, is excepted.

He Helped Her Writing

George Eliot's genius required the stimulus of experience. She might have remained a highbrow spinster writing articles for the reviews, if she had not the stimulating companionship of George Henry Lewis. Prompted by him she leapt into fame with "Adam Bede." In her second husband, Mr. Cross, she again found an invigorating companion.

Mrs. Flora Annie Steel, dean of British women novelists, has combined literature and the domesticities in a remarkable manner. Marriage made her a novelist. She says that she has never felt that her worth suffered from marriage and motherhood and also thinks that "no woman can really understand life until she has borne children."

Actress Rejoices in Family

Actresses nearly all marry. Miss Sybil Thorndike attributes her success to the tutelage and aid of her husband, Lewis Casson. She rejoices, too, as the mother of four children, two boys and two girls. They have helped her to a realization of the frenzy of outraged wifehood and motherhood in her portrayal of "Medea."

Dame Clara Butt and Mr. Kinley Mumford prove that marriage is no deterrent in the musical profession. Asked if she felt her husband and children to be a hindrance to her work, Dame Clara laughed at the suggestion.

As A Politician

The newest profession for women, that of M. P., has an interesting example in Lady Astor of married partnership in politics. Lady Astor has said that "if it had not been for my husband I would never have entered parliament."

When succession to his title compelled Lord Astor to leave the Commons for the Lords, he, though "the most domestic creature alive," urged his wife to contest his old seat at Plymouth so that she might work in Parliament for the special reforms dear to them both.

"Do my children look neglected?" Lady Astor often asked, "because I am trying to promote better laws for other people's children?"

Active in Religion

Mrs. Louise Creighton, widow of the late Bishop of London, is an outstanding example of a woman tremendously active all her married life in parochial and national church organizations, a public speaker, the author of many books, and the mother of seven children. Mrs. Creighton accomplished the herculean task of making both ends meet in the management of Fulham Palace, when her husband Bishop of London.

Headmistresses and women college professors seem the class least able to unite marriage with their profession.

RETENTION OF WATERSHEDS URGED

SALINAS, Oct. 8.—The necessity for maintaining the brushy hillsides and trees on the watersheds situated in the Monterey National Forest was brought before the county supervisors here Monday in an appeal for funds on the part of Chief Ranger Mendenhall of the U. S. Forest Bureau.

Mendenhall asked the county, through the supervisors, for $7,500 to be used in building and repairing 250 miles of trails in the Monterey National Forest and for the construction of a new lookout on Chew's ridge. Citizens from Soledad, Greenfield and King City accompanied Mendenhall in support of the appropriation.

Water Supply Failing

It was pointed out that the water level, in the natural reservoirs which underlie the Salinas and other valleys, was falling and that protection of the wooded slopes of the forest was the only method of keeping the level up. The danger from floods, if the forest should disappear, was also mentioned.

The supervisors indicated that they were unable to give the money from the general county fund, but indicated that they would furnish half of the requested amount if the chambers of commerce of the county would put up the rest.

Final action was put over until the next meeting of the board October 18.

Sights of Interest in Carmel and the Monterey Peninsula

Carmel Mission—Just south of Carmel on the Coast Highway. This historic structure dates back to 1770 when it was established by Father Junipero Serra. It is the most famous of all California Missions and is worth a special visit by every resident or visitor in Carmel. It was here that Father Serra, beloved of all his people, lived, worked, died and was buried. It was the scene of many early historic gatherings and has an atmosphere of sacredness and romance. The greatest minds of Father Serra's time made pilgrimages here, several of the Mexican governors were buried.

Carmel Highlands—One of the most scenic drives in the world, with magnificent views of the mountains and the rugged shore line of the Pacific ocean. Numerous coves indent the shore and views of grandeur which have attracted artists from all over the world may be seen after passing the road which branches off to Point Lobos.

Carmel Valley—Lined on either side by high hills and mountains, a delightful road winds its way for many miles up the valley. Carmel river adds to the attractiveness of this delightful valley, and many productive ranches may be seen.

Point Lobos—Grand and inspiring rock formation projecting into the Pacific Ocean between Carmel and Carmel Highlands, one of the most famous beauty spots in America and known for its famous cypress trees and cavernous rock formations into which the waters of the Pacific ceaselessly crash.

Carmel-by-the-Sea—The city of Carmel has many attractions and no visitor should leave without driving over as many as possible of its picturesque streets. In a superb setting of pine trees on every hand, quaint studios and cottages will be seen. These are occupied by artists, poets, writers, scientists, playwrights, musicians, retired business men, and others. Beautiful views may be had from various points including La Loma Terrace and the Hatton Fields tract.

Seventeen Mile Drive—World famous drive comprises a tour from Del Monte following through Monterey and Pacific Grove around the tip of the Peninsula to Pebble Beach along a shore-line unparalleled in America for its scenic beauty.

Fifty Mile Drive—Includes 17 Mile Drive via Monterey and Pacific Grove to Carmel, then to Carmel Highlands, back to highway leading up Carmel Valley, thence up Carmel Valley to Laureles Grade, over the grade back to the Monterey-Salinas highway, and back to Monterey. No drive of similar short distance contrasts so many different kinds of scenic beauty.

The Cypress Trees—Indigenous to the Monterey Peninsula and found nowhere else—age-old trees seen in masses on the 17-Mile Drive and at Point Lobos.

Presidio of Monterey—Beautifully located army post overlooking the Bay. Home of the 11th U. S. Cavalry and Second Battalion, 76th Field Artillery.

Monterey's Historic Buildings
San Carlos Church—Founded in 1770 by Father Serra, building erected in 1794. Webster Street to Figueroa.

Old Custom House—On the water front at the end of Alvarado Street. Over this building Commodore Sloat raised the American flag, July 7, 1846.

Colton Hall—First State capitol building, now City Hall of Monterey. Faces Pacific Street, between Madison and Jefferson Streets.

The Larkin House—Main and Jefferson Streets. Built by Thomas O. Larkin, first and only American consul to Monterey. To the right is Sherman and Halleck's headquarters. Lieutenant William T. Sherman was stationed here 1846-1847. Further to the right is

House of Four Winds—First Hall of Records in the State.

First Theatre in California—Corner Scott and Pacific Streets. Now a museum.

Old Whaling Station—Corner of Pacific and Decatur Streets.

Robert Louis Stevenson House—In Houston Street. The noted writer lived here in 1879.

Old Pacific Building—With beautiful patio and tea garden, corner Main and Scott Streets.

Cream Color Spot!

Itself with Crushed

Berry Pink

This business double of the fabric, perverts and side plait means most emphatically that one wants to be left in this particular Summer suite. With its fullness at yoke depth and excellent sleeve it is a frock that is particularly nice for silk and cotton crepe, or cotton voile. Crêpe de Chine is a town and country material of well-tested merit, for it flatters nicely, doesn't crush and is almost, if not quite, as cool as cotton. Checked taffeta is new and comes in charming Summer colors. Printed radium is thoroughly satisfactory and the latest designs show dots, small crowded patterns, small flowers, etc.

NOW FOR THE 900

R. P. Sexton, the manager of the Carmel telephone office, has announced that installation of additional equipment valued at over $5,000 has increased the facilities of the local exchange to provide for 900 subscribers. There has also been installed four new sections of switchboard.

Stacy Aumonier's forthcoming volume of short stories will be entitled "The Grand Piano."

Sir Arthur Sullivan is the subject of a volume in Kegan Paul's "Masters of Music" series. The author is Henry Saxe Wyndham.

Marjorie Bowen's survey of Dutch history will be entitled "The Netherlands Displayed."

New Publications Have Interest For Local Book Lovers

There are certain books of importance and of interest to Carmel that have just been published, or are on the publishers' fall lists. The John Day Co. have just published Charles Caldwell Dobie's "Less Than Kin" and Bont and Liveright are announcing the forthcoming publication of "Robinson Jeffers, 'The Man and the Artist,'" by George Sterling.

Two other books that will be published this fall that are of local interest are: "Hildegarda, the Story of an American Tessa," by Kathleen Norris, and published by Doubleday, Page and Co., and "The Ordeal of Civilization" by James Harvey Robinson, published by Harper Bros.

Deed—Arthur L. Stale and wife to Katherine M. Jorgensen, Sept. 1. Lots 1-3-5, Blk. 25, Oak Grove, Monterey.

Deed—Katherine M. Jorgensen to A. L. Stale and Beulah G. Stale, joint tenants, Sept. 1. Same as above deed.

said Renkert. The others, too, appeared somewhat excited; several appeared annoyed at being called away from their homes. . . to them it was an ordeal, an imposition, but all said that they were ready to do their duty and tell what they knew about the Carmel incident about which, the prosecutors have admitted, the whole case rests."

The Los Angeles Evening Herald of September 28 describes some of the Carmel witnesses. Helen Hilliard is described, under a photograph that is a straight libel, as "The Pretty Miss Hilliard." "Vivacious and petite Mrs. Jeanette Parkes of Carmel, charming in her combination of autumnal browns and amber beads hanging to her waist, will be still another memory picture.

"And Daisy Bostick, also of Carmel, added quite a little of personality to the court yesterday. A color poem in straight Egyptian cut frock of deep sea blue, small cloche hat of vert de gris and bois de rose and sport coat of neutral biscuit color striped in the gray greens and rose, she was truly a portrait to linger with one."

(Note: Daisy Bostick, when questioned about this, said that she doesn't wish to sail under any false colors (maybe she means that bois de rose and vert de gris) and that the costume was borrowed!)

The Los Angeles Evening Express of September 29 has this to say about Mr. Benedict:

"The honest, sturdy, fine figure of Howard C. Benedict, the Carmel landlord, whose testimony yesterday won the admiration of every intelligent man and woman in the courtroom. It was so perfectly the expression of the best impulses in American manhood, the desire of a good citizen to aid the progress of justice, the impulse of a chivalrous gentleman to give a woman an even break, the innate courtesy of a kindly neighbor and landlord who wished to make strangers in his city at home and comfortable, and, withal, an intelligent citizen's recognition of the gravity of the situation in a country committed to orderly living and honest dealing.

"This man's eyes and his voice and his entire bearing are impressive in the best sense of the word, and I have never seen a witness who left a better impression behind him. He sat there this morning, watching, without any malevolence and without curiosity. He watched merely with interest and grave attention, while back of him nodded many heads, which had come to wag."

And, from the view of the Los Angeles papers, that's that. . . at least part of it.

Many Details Are Brought to Trustees At Last Meeting

Routine business, permitting the hanging of signs, cutting of trees, reading of ordinances and allowing of bills for the month of September, occupied the attention of the Carmel city trustees last Monday night.

Report of the city treasurer showed that $827.94 are now on hand in the city coffers, September bills allowed amounting to $2,290.60.

City Marshal August Englund petitioned the trustees for an increase in salary. He is now getting $150 per month and asks $175. The matter was referred to the police commissioner.

Considerable discussion was held about how, why, when and where someone received permission to rip up the sidewalk on San Carlos to install gasoline tanks underneath and to install pumps on the curbing. After the discussion had progressed for about half an hour, Street Superintendent Fraser arose to explain the "low down" on the case. It seems there was a misunderstanding between the contractor, M. J. Murphy, the trustees, the man who installed the pumps and everyone else in the deal.

The ordinance concerning sidewalks, gutters and curbing was given its second reading and adopted.

A resolution concerning improvement bond issues was read. Several merchants asked permission to hang signs. They were granted the right.

Several requests were made for permission to trim and cut down obstructing or dangerous trees. The street superintendent was granted $77 with which to eliminate trees designated as menaces to public safety.

Trustee Wood was authorized to ascertain what price is asked for a strip of land now used by the city as a road at the corner of north San Antonio and Fourth street. This strip is on the Burns property.

Three members of the fire department, Chief Robert Leidig, and Assistant Chiefs Coffee and Littlefield were voted $30 each as hotel money during their week's stay at the Fresno convention of the California Firemen's Association. The trustees agreed that $90 could not be expended better than toward the education of the enthusiastic men. Firemen from all parts of the state will attend the conclave.

Police Judge Fraser reported 28 persons were brought before him during the month of September, eight of these were speeders, six held for cutting in and seven without driver's license, two for possessing liquor. Fines collected during the month amounted to $107, he reported.

Marshal Englund reported arrested one man for vagrancy, one for petit larceny and that there were several cases of measles in the town.

Traffic Officer McCune reported arresting 24 traffic violators, one for possession.

The fire department reported four alarms during the month, five drills and 42 inspections by the fire chief. Nine new fire hydrants were reported in action.

CARMEL TENNIS COURTS PLANNED

Once more Carmelites are petitioning for a tennis court. For many years there has been no court in town, and players are forced to go to Del Monte, Pebble Beach, or, of late, the new country club. This is particularly trying and difficult for the younger generation, so efforts are being made to have the city make courts on the vacant lot on Ocean and Mission streets.

Owing to the efforts of many of the tennis enthusiasts forty citizens have promised $15 each for the tennis courts, and as guest players would be charged a small sum, the courts would be practically self supporting. All this has been pointed out to the Board of Trustees, but it has been left to manana, and the Carmelites play at Pebble Beach or Del Monte, or, as is the case most frequently, not at all.
